1. MAO Tze-tung has set 16 May 1950 as the date for the conquest of Tibet by the Chinese Red Army.
2. Shortly afterwards, probably in June 1950, Communist infiltration and agitation among the large number of dissident hill tribes in Northeastern India and particularly in the hill tracts of Assam is expected to result in serious outbreaks.
3. The shortest route to Lhasa from India is a hill track from Dirang Dzong, northeast through the Balipara Hills. Recently thirty or forty alleged Tibetan Communists working as porters were intercepted on their way down into Assam from Tibet. They were escorted back to the Tibetan border and set free.
